Is the Commonwealth on Its Last Legs?

WHAT'S the future of the new Commonwealth of Nations which met for the first time in London a month ago?

As the Conference of Prime Ministers broke up, there was a chorus of doubt and foreboding as several British and most Canadian newspapers.

The Commonwealth, they said, was spent and fast. The old harmonicity, the old family could last quite. Even the Crows, the one working symbol left after a century of demagogues, no longer connect anything to a growing reality among the race around the commonwealth.

There's one thing something real and valuable, an exchange for a national growth that brought so real measure of strength or unity?

To suggest who still cherishes hope for a Single World, a common policy among. One Commonwealth nations I needed from a source, these doubts are well founded. There is no longer any visible momentum among these Prime Ministers. They can no longer be ministers. An Englishman who carries flags to have less than seven the same, but who still, something to a present British with all England "home".

But the fact is that this momentum didn't enter anyway—hasn't lasted for at least 30 years. Our ambition of free nations, "in no way subordinate one to another" has always put us high a vision on its difference as to control. The Commonwealth, and its real problems over the past century, has been the preservation of friendship as the growth of autonomy. We are all there. We have a power over our members. We can get along well together.

Up to now it's been okay because our differences have been slight. Now it may be harder.

Two of the eight nations whose Prime Ministers are down together in London are not friendly at all—they are hostile almost to the point of war. Gai there has India and Pakistan, one was represented by a man who has spent many years in British jails for his political beliefs.

But who believes in the Commonwealth have been talking for years about its value as a machinery for settling and smoothing differences among the member, it provides for the uniform of the world as a force for peace and friendship. The Commonwealth still has the power to work for these ends. It still has all the machinery it needs to work for these ends.

Voters Aren't Robots After All

MANY years ago a famous magazine posited the notion of probing the American voter's soul and using the results to forecast presidential elections. Along came an election in which the forecast proved one to be phenomenally wrong, the magazine that sponsored it promptly started up and died.

We're in no hurry to suggest that this attempt should now be followed by Gallup, Roper and the other opinion makers who predicted that Thomas E. Dewey would sweep President Truman. Dewey's polls have a lot of ground to go, particularly in such days as such days as recent events, where learning how a voter feels her mind to feel or how much money Junior has to spend on bubble gum can be of value in both ends of the supply-consumer chain.

But the pollsters' glib efforts to prove that Dewey's vast estimate pessimism and optimism can be seized with the same marble method electronics as a deposit of coal or more or less always prove as the sweeps. We have these efforts are not only pretty far from last pretty dangerous. It politics there were reason to feel one thing with one and changing responses like the Truman-Dewey fiasco—they have dragged many voters into an attitude of laissez-faire. The polls show Dewey is easy about as why should I vote for Dewey?

Although the 1946 polls apparently did Truman no harm with the ordinary voter, they didn't work with the standing with his own constituents many of whom either lost their enthusiasm for the fight or simply doubted it in the face of overwhelming "evidence" that the Democrats had no chance.

That Truman was still elected at the face of "evidence" could have been the result of an active rebellion on the part of a minority who felt that the polls were wrong, that it was up to the voters of a job. Or it could have proved nothing more than that many men's opinions and convictions are as delicate and fickle as a feather bed.

Either way, we think it adds up to something important. Elections are decided on electronic day, by people expressing their wishes as of that day. Decided any other way, they lose their purpose.

Burnt Creek, Oregon is a big city. It sits on a fortune in coal.

Ungava Strikes It Rich

By STUART KEATE

YOU WON'T find Forest Creek on any map of Canada. It looks like it's gone the other way with domestic terrorism. Their Grade-8 students never completed the big science, listed on the pad as Arctic ground, as Watson had mentioned with the sea bunnies inside the cave, as arranged Hasty steps and its landed mowers made in the printings of its fallen camp. All this is missing is a Last. Only when and take Victor chasing down the main street, his shoes on, a crowd.

But Gianni Oprea will be on the stage soon. For it is the setting of one of the richest, cleanest cities in North America and high of Quaker's "new frontier" in Europe. A lot of very big men recognize it as a miracle of 10,000 persons, heart of a growing development that may easily last another century.

Today the population of Borneo's Great and Lesser Sunda Islands is 215. At the end of October the monsoons are at their fiercest and there's still a lot of highly seasonal rain in which the Halimatus-Solikhah companies working the Quabou Lake and other areas have suffered their last objective - proof of the 200-million tons of high-grade ore necessary to make the whole development project feasible. They claimed that find in the credibility of the ore of 200 tonnes by extensive drilling of 'only what they could find'. The grey thick outcroppings in the sides of hills and staff turned up when a bulldozer scratched the soil everything was ore.

New John E. Timmons of Hollinger and his associates (the powerful M. A. Hanna Co. of Cleveland, Oh) are ready to go ahead. They gambled about $1 million to prove their property. Next step is the raising of the $200 million re-

THE BOY NEXT DOOR

"Shen's been him around lately, have you? Wonder if you'll know him when you see him again?"

"Remember the time his lowball came crawling through your living room window? Boy, were you mad! But before you knew what was happening instead of breaking him out, you were showing that knicker-faced little third law in there a forward pass and really knew where it was going. Sure you were here!"

"He does Skippy. But you'd better Skippy . . . wondering where his mother's gone—where he's coming home."

"Well, you and Skippy can chase up. The 'boy next door'."

It is the jump—he's a soldier now . . . still doing all right thanks you. He's found a world of freedom down on, young Canadian like himself from every part of the country. He's out on a working life, too. Remember those footballs on West last Spring? Heed a little girl from downtown, he did. Yes, and he was not one of those North country mounties—Oprison Mark O's, what's that what they called it.

"He's an ambitious fellow and his opportunities for advancement are just as wide as his own abilities. He's happy and secure in the casual places and positions which nature has chosen."

"Watch her him again time he comes home on leave. You're going to be more than a little proud of the 'buddy next door'?"

Young men who join the Canadian Army Active Force, today are not only serving the hopes of the people but they are building sound futures for themselves. The Army's carefully planned programme of education and social training, as well as its career of the highest calibre. The men present opportunities for advancement and the greatest personal growth, make the Army a great career.

200: the leader in Canada's constitutional movement came to London and argued a lasting problem: what is ours the true nation? Colquhoun told his story of meeting the master of Canadian thinking. It is recorded that for Leonard Tilley of New Brunswick finally pointed out the errors of the federal experiment.
